Kelly's GALLERY OF FEAR anthology wraps wraparound

Tuesday, April 07, 2009 02:58 PM Michael Gingold News - Film News

Indie filmmaker Alan Rowe Kelly sent along word that his long-aborning anthology feature GALLERY OF FEAR has wrapped, with the completion of the wraparound segment "Critic's Choice." This part of the film stars FANGORIA RADIO's Debbie Rochon (pictured) as Roberta Van Houten, a nasty art critic who introduces each story.

The four tales are "A Far Cry from Home" and "Down the Drain," along with "By Her Hand, She Draws You Down" and "It Rips," directed by Anthony G. Sumner, also a cinematographer and FX creator on the project (see more details and photos here). The filmmaking team additionally includes cinematographers Bart Mastronardi and Dominick Sivilli, composer/sound designer Tom Burns and FX artists Brian Spears, Benzy, Michael Todd Schneider and Henry Boriello, along with actors Zoë Daelman Chlanda, Jerry Murdock, Joshua Neston, Terry Shane, Raine Brown, Katherine O'Sullivan, Don Money, Benzy, Susan Adriensen, Terry M. West, Mike Lane, Miguel Lopez, Keith Fraser, Jessie May Laumann, Robb Leigh Davis, Tom Lanier, Robert Norman and Sandra Schaller—many of them veterans of previous Kelly pics.

"'A Far Cry from Home' is already making its way through the fest circuits, and the reviews are outstanding," Kelly says. "We promise all the tales in GALLERY OF FEAR share an equal caliber of suspense, scares, gore and storytelling. There will be something for everybody!" You can see the latest "Far Cry from Home" trailer below and GALLERY OF FEAR's MySpace page here; an official website will be up shortly.

Agreed. A Far Cry from Home is fantastic. Its good, gritty, and pushes a lot of boundaries. Looking forward to checking out the rest of the anthology!

I just have to say that A Far Cry From Home is absolutely wonderful. I got a chance to check it out in Chicago at Fango. I'm a hug fan of Alan's work and I expect this and everything from Alan in the future to be even better! Great job Alan!! Mitch
